A HANDBOOK
FOR PROMOTING
ORGAN & TISSUE DONATION
DURING NATIONAL DONATE LIFE MONTH
April is National Donate Life Month, a time when the nation’s organ and tissue donation and transplant community heightens its promotion of the need for life-saving donors.

LifeQuest created this handbook specifically to aid our hospital partners, schools, area businesses, civic groups, faith communities and volunteers in developing promotions in support of National Donate Life Month.

Whether you work for a hospital or a tax collector office, are enrolled in high school or college, or lead a civic club or religious organization, this handbook will provide you with a multitude of ideas and resources to make your National Donate Life Month celebration a huge success.

National Donate Life Month was first designated in 2003 with the support of Tommy Thompson, then secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, and each year since, the number of events, activities and campaigns held to promote donation grows.

Many of the campaigns promoted during National Donate Life Month are supported by Donate Life America, a national advocacy group dedicated to increasing the number of lives saved through donation and transplantation.

LifeQuest Organ Recovery Services, the organ donor program serving all of northern Florida, works closely with Donate Life America as well as Donate Life Florida, our statewide coalition of donor programs that oversees the management of Florida’s donor registry.
SPECIAL EVENTS & ACTIVITIES

No matter what type of organization or institution you work for, belong to or attend, there are special events specifically designed to reach you and your contemporaries with the Donate Life message. Here are some examples of events that have worked very well in our service area or other areas of Florida and the country.
DONOR REGISTRATION STATIONS / INFORMATION BOOTHS

Setting up a registration station or information booth allows you to answer questions from your colleagues or fellow students and provide an immediate opportunity to have them enroll on Florida’s donor registry.

First, you will need to get approval to set up a table in a high-traffic area of your business or facility. In a hospital, for example, the entrance or exit for the hospital cafeteria has a lot of foot traffic. In a business, it might be in a break room, lunch room or lobby. In a school, it could be the cafeteria or commons.

You will need to have someone well-versed in the facts about organ donation on site who can answer any questions. That could be someone from LifeQuest, another local donor program or a volunteer who has been through LifeQuest training. LifeQuest can provide cards or brochures with information about the critical need for organs and tissue and ways to register as a donor in Florida.

Volunteers can help register those who are interested in becoming donors by using the Donate Life Florida scan app.
Flags Across America is a nationwide campaign that began in October 2008 with a simple question on a national listserv of people in the donation community: What if every one of our hospitals, transplant centers and OPOs flew the Donate Life flag during April? The idea took off, and by the time April rolled around, hundreds of Donate Life flags were flying across the country. Within a few years, that number had risen dramatically.

Flying the Donate Life flag is one of the most popular and dramatic ways to observe National Donate Life Month. If your facility has a flagpole, you are perfectly positioned to participate. There are a number of ways this observance can be made:

- Raise the Donate Life flag alongside the U.S. flag for the entire month of April.

- As part of a flag-raising ceremony, invite a donor family member to speak to staff or students about the life-saving and life-improving changes their loved one’s courage and generosity created for someone in desperate need. LifeQuest may be able to help identify a donor family who is willing to speak during the flag-raising ceremony.

- Work with your organization’s leadership and communications/public relations department to ensure that the entire organization knows about the event and understands the importance of the flag-raising.

- Ask your communications/public relations staff to get the word out to local news media. The flag-raising has visual appeal, and local TV news stations and newspapers may be interested in coverage. (*See the media section for more information on pitching stories.)

- Some hospitals have developed significant and meaningful variations on the Donate Life flag-raising. Some fly the flag year-round in support of organ and tissue donation. Others raise the flag at the time donation authorization has been given, often having a family member involved, and leave the flag up for two days to honor the donor and their family.
One day each April is set aside as a time when donation supporters are encouraged to wear blue and green, the Donate Life colors. It is a meaningful and fun way to bring attention to the cause of organ and tissue donation, and it can be done anywhere.

Donate Life America also runs a national contest for the best Blue & Green Day photos in a variety of categories. For a flyer with the photo categories and contest rules, go to DonateLife.net/blue-green-day/, then download the file named Flyer with Photo Contest Information. Here are some suggestions on how your organization can participate:

- Encourage employees to show their colors. Wear blue and green clothing, ties, shoes, scarves, jewelry and sunglasses.
- Decorate your desk, office, nursing station, breakroom, lunchroom or classroom with blue and green balloons and streamers.
- Share blue and green cupcakes or cookies with your coworkers.
- Have friendly competitions between offices, nursing units, classes, grades or teams. Invite a transplant recipient or donor family member to judge which are most creative.
- Take photos and share them on your Facebook, Instagram and Twitter accounts. Share them on the LifeQuest, Donate Life Florida and Donate Life America Facebook pages. Talk to your public relations and communications department about posting them on your organization’s social media pages.
TESTIMONIAL SPEAKER EVENTS

Inviting a speaker to share their experiences with organ and tissue donation and transplantation is a great way to inspire others to embrace donation, as they are hearing a story from someone who has genuinely been touched by donation.

LifeQuest can connect you with trained speakers who have either had a transplant, have a family member who became a donor, or are a living donor or caregiver. Their stories are inspiring and often motivate others to register as organ donors. Transplant or organ recovery staff may also available for speaking engagements.

If you cannot identify or arrange for someone to come into your organization, there are many wonderful stories of donation and transplantation already written that can be shared during National Donate Life Month.

Additionally, you may have individuals within your organization who have been touched personally by donation but never were asked to share their story. You can work with your communications/public relations department and administration for the most appropriate and sensitive ways of reaching out to your employees or members to gauge interest and obtain the necessary consent.
LUNCH & LEARN EVENTS

If your organization has a lunch-and-learn program, also called brown bag luncheons, talk to the organizer about devoting one or more April event to the importance of organ and tissue donation and transplantation.

This is another forum for having employees in your organization who have experience in donation and transplantation to share their stories. If there is not anyone from inside your organization who can speak, LifeQuest has trained volunteers, including transplant recipients and many donor family members, who are pleased to tell their stories.

POSTER BOARD CONTESTS

A creative way of engaging different hospital departments, classes or entire grades is to host a friendly poster board contest. Encourage each unit to create a board that showcases how lives can be saved and enhanced through organ, tissue and eye donation. In Jacksonville, Baptist Medical Center hosted a contest that drew 13 entries. The boards were displayed prominently in the lobby for four days from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., and employees and visitors were given ballots to vote for their favorite board. The winning unit was treated to a pizza party.
Most churches, temples and other houses of worship are supportive of organ and tissue donation, and they often will participate in activities which promote donation.

Approach your own clergy members or other faith communities about having a donor registration drive, an information table or guest speaker on donation and transplantation.

There also are many resources and references available for inclusion in bulletins, such as inserts, suggested scripture, psalms and songs. Please see the appendix for examples.

Nearly every faith sees organ and tissue donation as an act of love and charity or as a decision to be dictated by conscience and left to the individual.
For many years, the green ribbon was the symbol for organ donation. Although the donation and transplant community widely uses the Donate Life logo and call-to-action, the green ribbon still serves as a reminder to many people to think about organ donation and join the registry.

The idea of the “living” green ribbon was started by Donate Life Florida’s student volunteers involved in their college “Get Carded” chapters. Over the years, Florida college students have made more than a dozen Living Green Ribbons in celebration of National Donate Life Month.

To create a successful living green ribbon event, you will need a large outdoor, grassy area; a crowd of 150 or more; a custom green T-shirt for each participant or requirement that everyone wear a similar shade of green clothing and a photographer who is not afraid of heights! LifeQuest can help you with the finer points of organization, logistics and choreography.

Publicity & Media

National Donate Life Month provides a rich opportunity to engage media of all kinds to deliver the message about the life-saving and life-improving possibilities of organ, tissue and eye donation to your hospital, organization, school and community using traditional news media, as well as social media platforms.
NEWS RELEASES

If you are planning an event or activity, consider inviting the local media to cover the event. This will give your organization outstanding exposure as an organization dedicated to helping others and saving lives.

The appendix of this handbook includes a sample news release, newsletter article and letter to the editor that you can customize for your organization’s events and promotions. We have also included frequently asked questions about organ and tissue donation, current facts and statistics about organ donation as well as background information on National Donate Life Month that will be helpful when you pitch your event to the media. These documents can be provided separately in PDF or Word versions upon request.

SOCIAL MEDIA

Using your social media platforms is an easy and effective way to reach a large number of employees, students or members. In addition to posting photos and stories from within your organization and liking and sharing stories from other local, state and national pages, there are a number of graphic images that you can share.

You can add the Donate Life or Donate Life Florida logo or the custom artwork for National Donate Life Month to your Facebook page, Twitter profile or Instagram account. LifeQuest also can provide you with specially-designed Facebook banners and cover images.

Ask your organization’s communications/public relations department about reserving a spot on the screen saver schedule, and LifeQuest can provide artwork for that as well.

Tweet a National Donate Life Message to your followers with a different message every day throughout the month. Sample tweets can be found in the appendix.
MESSAGE FROM THE CEO

A positive message about organ and tissue donation from the chief executive officer, administrator, principal or superintendent of an organization can have a real impact on employees.

Approach your CEO or administrator about sending an email to all employees or members about the altruistic decision to become a donor.

A sample message from the CEO that you can customize can be found in the appendix.

VIDEOS OR MESSAGING FOR CCTV

Most hospitals, schools and businesses have closed-circuit television systems in waiting areas, patient rooms, classrooms and break rooms.

Talk to your administration/public relations and communications staff about adding National Donate Life Month messaging and videos to the CCTV lineup. This is a very effective way to keep the message in front of the people with whom you work and the people you serve.

Sample :30 and :60 PSA scripts are included in the appendix, and videos can be downloaded from the Donate Life America website, DonateLife.net/videos.

CREATING A CULTURE OF DONATION

Creating a culture of donation involves more than just a one-time event or announcement. It includes embracing organ and tissue donation as an opportunity available to each and every member of your organization. It involves sharing the facts about donation, providing outlets for your employees, students or members to enroll on the registry and sharing the heart-warming stories of individuals whose lives have been saved or enhanced through the gifts of organ, eye and tissue donation.

Just as some organizations adopt specific charities, fundraising campaigns and public service initiatives throughout the year, your organization can incorporate the donation message into your corporate, civic or academic structure. Consider dedicating a page on your website or Intranet for donation-related stories, statistics and activities. You could set an annual goal for the number of individuals who enroll on Florida’s donor registry and establish friendly challenges between departments. You could add a hyperlink behind the Donate Life Florida logo on your homepage that takes a viewer directly to the registry to enroll. Sharing the stories of your employees who have been touched by donation or transplantation is another way to inspire others to register as organ and tissue donors and is an easy and all-welcoming way of showing compassion and kindness for those in need.
APPENDIX

The tools found in this appendix are intended make your activities during National Donate Life Month more effective. Feel free to customize them for use in your special events and publicity.
Suggested Scriptures and Hymns

Scriptures
The following scriptures are recommended for National Donate Life Month activities in churches, because of their messages of giving, healing and understanding of the relationships between human beings. They can be used as calls to worship, responsive readings and affirmations of faith. This list is not exhaustive, but merely a starting point for worship and possible sermon ideas.

April is National Donate Life Month

[Your City, State] (April 1, 2017) – National Donate Life Month was declared by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and instituted by Donate Life America in 2003 as a time for the nation’s organ and tissue donation and transplantation community to focus its attention on the critical need for life-saving donors. National Donate Life Month is celebrated throughout the month of April.

LifeQuest Organ Recovery Services, the federally-designated organ donor program serving a 36-county region of northern Florida, and [your organization name] are encouraging Floridians to learn the facts about organ and tissue donation and to join Florida’s donor registry at DonateLifeFlorida.org.

“There are nearly 5,400 patients on the waiting list at transplant centers in Florida,” said Danielle Cornell, executive director of LifeQuest, “and each one is waiting for the Gift of Life. By documenting our decisions to become donors on Florida’s registry, we are making a commitment to help save lives.”

In 2016, more than 33,600 patients nationally received life-saving organ transplants, more than 2,000 of whom were transplanted at Florida centers. There are nearly 120,000 patients on the national organ transplant waiting list, and it is estimated that every 10 minutes, another person is added to this list.

“The most important thing we can do to increase donation is to document our decisions by joining the donor registry,” [name and title of representative from your organization]. “In less than one minute, you can make a decision that could save someone’s life.”

2017 National Donate Life Month

April is National Donate Life Month, a time when the donation and transplantation community concentrates its yearlong efforts to educate Americans about the critical shortage of donated organs and tissue and remind them of the importance of documenting one’s own donation decision.

According to the United Network for Organ Sharing (UNOS), the non-profit organization that maintains the nation’s organ transplant database, nearly 120,000 people currently are waiting for life-saving organ transplants. Nearly 5,400 of them are listed at transplant centers in Florida. This year, thousands of patients also will need life-enhancing tissue transplants, such as skin grafts and heart valves.

[Insert a personal testimonial from someone within your organization who has been touched by organ and tissue donation or transplantation.]

The limited supply of donated organs is not meeting the enormous demand—roughly 22 people die each day while waiting—but there is something we all can do about it. We can donate life! One organ donor can save the lives of up to eight people, and one tissue donor can help more than 50. One donor can keep a family together. One donor can give a child his first real, play-filled summer or make it possible for a man to take his grandchildren fishing.

Documenting your decision to Donate Life has never been easier. Visit Florida’s donor registry at DonateLifeFlorida.org to learn the facts and join the registry.
Sample Letter to the Editor

April is National Donate Life Month, an annual campaign by the organ donation and transplantation community that encourages Americans to learn the facts about donation and to document their own donation decisions by joining their state’s donor registry.

I encourage you to learn the facts about donation and make the decision that may one day save the lives of others in need. It won’t take but a moment of your time.

According to the United Network for Organ Sharing (UNOS), the non-profit organization that maintains the nation’s organ transplant database, nearly 120,000 people currently are awaiting life-saving organ transplants. Each one is waiting for a chance to live.

Until the day when there are enough donor organs, thousands of patients awaiting transplants and their families, their friends and colleagues will continue, every day, to hear the words, “not yet.” Their need is our challenge, and we can meet this challenge by saying yes to donation and helping to eliminate the wait. Consider for a moment what that means.

We’ve all waited in line to see a movie. We’ve waited for our number to be called at the deli. We’ve drummed our fingers on the wheel during rush hour, waiting to inch our way toward the traffic light. We lose patience when it takes more than a few seconds for an app to load. Waiting is time spent in-between other things. It is the limbo of “not yet.”

Each patient waiting for an organ transplant faces a day-by-day struggle for survival, a week-to-week effort to maintain some semblance of what the rest of us take for granted. Waiting to them might mean six hours of being attached to a dialysis machine, three times each week. Or it may mean being out of breath - always.

The limited supply of donated organs is not meeting the enormous demand—roughly 22 people dying each day while waiting—but there is something we all can do about it. We can donate life! On average, one organ and tissue donor can help more than 50 people. One donor can keep a family together. One donor can give a child his first real, play-filled summer. One donor can make it possible for a man to take his grandchildren fishing.

Documenting your decision to Donate Life has never been easier. Visit Florida’s donor registry at DonateLifeFlorida.org to learn the facts and join the registry. Taking a couple of minutes out of your morning may someday save another person’s life. What greater legacy can we leave behind than to have given the Gift of Life?

Frequently Asked Questions About Organ & Tissue Donation

Q: Is brain death like being in a coma?
No. Brain death is death. There is no recovery from death. The definition of brain death is the complete and irreversible cessation of all brain activity. Even though a patient is still connected to a ventilator (a machine which artificially maintains bodily functions such as respiration and circulation), when a person is declared brain dead, he or she no longer is alive.

Q: Is there an age limit on being a donor or recipient?
There is no specific age range for donation. A person can be in his or her 70s or even 80s and still donate. The coordinators who evaluate potential donors perform a variety of clinical tests to determine which organs can be recovered.

Q: How do I know they will try to save my life if I get in an accident if they see “donor” on my license?
Every EMT and every ER or ICU nurse or doctor has one goal: to save patients’ lives. Each of them does his or her best to stabilize the patient and get them to the next stage (from the ambulance to the ER, from the ER to the OR, from the OR to the ICU, from the ICU to home). When all life-saving efforts have been exhausted, and the patient has died, or it is evident that death is imminent, the hospital will refer that patient to the OPO.

Q: Can anyone become a donor?
Most people can become organ or tissue donors. There are certain medical conditions that would rule out a potential donor, but we encourage people to let the OPO make that clinical determination and not rule themselves out of a decision based on the assumption that they cannot donate. We encourage everyone to make an informed decision about donation based on the facts.

Q: Who pays for the donation?
Ultimately the person who gets an organ transplant will pay for the costs associated with organ recovery. The donor’s family never pays for the costs associated with organ donation.

Q: Can donors or their families get paid?
No. It is illegal and against the 1984 National Organ Transplant Act to pay someone for an organ or tissue. All organ donation in the United States is done altruistically.

Q: What if I don’t join the registry?
We encourage people not only to make an informed decision about donation, but also to take action. Join Florida’s donor registry at DonateLifeFlorida.org. If you don’t live in Florida, go to RegisterMe.org to join the national registry. If you have not joined a registry, it will be your next-of-kin who makes the decision for you.

Q: Is my religion against donation?
All major eastern and western religions either fully endorse donation (as the ultimate act of kindness toward humanity) or they leave the decision up to the individual.

Q: I heard that rich people and celebrities don’t have to wait as long to get transplanted.
Not true. The transplant waiting list is blind to one’s celebrity or financial status. The only information that appears next to one’s name on the list is their height and weight, blood type, age, severity of illness and length of time on the list. People are transplanted when they reach the top of the list and are matched with the next available organ.

Q: What tissue can be donated and how many lives can be changed?
Among the tissue that can be donated are skin, bone, corneas, heart valves, tendons, veins and ligaments. The solid organs are heart, liver, kidney, lung, pancreas and small intestine.

Q: What do I need to tell my family?
That you learned about organ donation. That you have made a decision to save lives by becoming an organ and tissue donor and that you want them to make a positive decision to save lives through organ donation as well.
2017 Facts and Statistics About Organ Donation

- LifeQuest is one of only 58 organ procurement organizations in the country.
- One organ donor can save up to eight lives through the donation of the lungs, kidneys, heart, liver, pancreas and small intestine.
- On average, 22 people die each day while awaiting organ transplants.
- One tissue donor can enhance the lives of more than 50 people.
- Nationally, nearly 120,000 people are awaiting life-saving organ transplants.
- More than 90 percent of Americans support organ donation, but the national registration rate remains less than 50 percent.
- It has never been easier to register as an organ and tissue donor. Simply register online at DonateLifeFlorida.org.
- Organ and tissue donation does not hinder funeral arrangements, and a donor can have an open casket funeral.
- 48 percent of the U.S. population age 18 and over has registered as donors.
- More than 80 percent of those listed on the national transplant waiting list are awaiting kidney transplants.
- About 95 percent of organ donor registrations occur in driver license offices.
- The oldest organ donor was nine days shy of turning 93 and became a liver donor.
- More than 683,000 organ transplants have occurred in the U.S. since 1988.
- More than 40,000 corneal transplants occur in the U.S. annually.
- Each year there are nearly 6,000 living donations in the U.S.
- More than 1 million tissue transplants are performed each year, and the surgical need for tissue has been rising steadily.
